

Does Nigeria need a large-scale battery storage system?

However, the use case for large-scale battery storage is glaringly obvious in Nigeria. From food preservation to local clinics, and rural electrification and small businesses, power storage systems should factor significantly in government's policy plans.

Is Nigeria staking a claim on the energy sector investment frontier?

Systems that capture energy and store it for later use, either to supply power to an off-grid application or to complement a peak demand, are the emerging energy sector investment frontier, but Nigeria is staking a claim.

Should storage solutions be integrated into the Nigerian mini-grid market?

PA-NPSP's survey of mini-grid developers supports this conclusion, with many developers viewing the integration of storage solutions into the Nigerian mini-grid market as a necessity in order for the market to continue growth.

What percentage of Nigeria's Gas reserves are stranded?

About 40% of Nigeria's total proved gas reserves have been identified as stranded gas caps, which are not available in the short term. In addition, non-associated gas constitutes a vast majority of the reserves that are available in the short-medium term (Yar'adua, 2007).

Are there gas reserves in Nigeria?

Apart from the recoverable reserve estimate, there are yet to be found gas reserves in Nigeria, given the largely unexplored position of the resources. The gas quality is high, virtually without sulphur, low in CO₂ and rich in liquids (condensate) content.

Is natural gas development a priority in Nigeria's Energy Strategy?

While oil production will remain an important aspect of the country's energy strategy, natural gas development has emerged as a key priority in the government's plans. Nigeria is already a significant gas exporter, and had 206.5 trn cu feet of gas reserves as of 2021.
